

CROSS CULTURAL VALUES CHART

Autonomy	identity/power/responsibility	Community
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • My identity comes from my individual characteristics. • I believe that, for the most part, my choices determine my destiny. • I'm responsible for my own failures. • I value my independence. • I am responsible for my own decisions and how they impact me. • I believe that I have distinctive and unique qualities. • My relationships evolve based on my location, job, and circumstances. 		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • My identity comes from membership in a group (family, tribe, or community). • My destiny is most often the result of my circumstances and background. • Circumstances and destiny are often responsible for failure. • I value the interdependence and dependence in my group/community/tribe. • Making decisions is best done in my family/community/tribe, benefitting all. • Harmony and fitting in with others are most important. • My relationships are stable; most come from family/tribe/community.

Crisis	planning	Non-Crisis
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • I anticipate potential problems (tend to be pessimistic). • I rely on research and expert advice. • I am motivated to get clarity and, so, make prompt decisions. • I stick to the plan when the crisis hits. 		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • I tend to discount potential problems (tend to be optimistic). • I'm a bit suspicious of "experts". • I have a high tolerance for ambiguity, so I tend to delay decisions. • I improvise when a crisis hits.

The Cultural Values Chart draws from many sources, most notably Sherwood G. Lingenfelter and Marvin K. Mayers in Ministering Cross-Culturally: An Incarnational Model for Personal Relationships (Grand Rapids: Baker Academic, 2007).